The Canberra Hospital is a 600+-bed tertiary referral centre, serving a population of 650,000 from the Australian Capital Territory (ACT) and South-eastern New South Wales (NSW). It supports all major acute specialties apart from major burns and solid organ transplantation.

The Intensive Care Unit admits over 1900 admissions per year. 25% are elective cardiac surgery admissions, 25% are general medical, 30% are elective surgical and 5% are paediatric. There are 31 physical bed spaces with a dedicated cardio-thoracic bay, and 4 fully vented negative/positive pressure isolation rooms with separate anterooms. The unit is accredited for 24 months of core training towards the Fellowship of The College of Intensive Care Medicine (i.e. CICM C24 status).

A well established helicopter retrieval service is associated with the campus.

Interested Intensive Care Senior Registrars may have the opportunity to participate in this service.

Research activities:

The Canberra Hospital ICU has an active research program that includes:

- Pharmaceutical company clinical (multi-centre) trials
- ANZICS (Australian & New Zealand Intensive Care Society) Clinical Trials Group (CTG) trials
- in-hospital trials in areas of interest.

There is a full time research nurse, data manager and director of research.

Senior Registrar/Fellowship Program:

The Senior Registrar's position is a transitional role between that of Registrar and Consultant, with flexibility and graded responsibility to allow increasing clinical autonomy, and development of skills in research and administration. We offer a structured teaching program tailored for the needs of the advanced trainee, with a focus on passing the CICM fellowship exam.

Ideally the Senior Registrar will have completed two years of training in intensive care medicine at registrar level, at least one of these as an advanced trainee.

Provisional fellows in anaesthesia, emergency medicine or other suitable specialties may also be appointed to the senior registrar position. It is expected that all appointees will be registered with the College of Intensive Care Medicine (CICM).
