This hands-on Introductory Echocardiography Course is designed for medical staff with little or no prior echocardiography experience. The course will provide a strong foundation in echocardiography principles, image acquisition and interpretation, equipping participants with the skills needed for point-of-care ultrasound in critical care settings. Moreover, it is a CICM Approved course.

Key topics covered:

Ultrasound physics and knobology, image acquisition and artefacts, left heart assessment, right heart assessment, pericardial disease and haemodynamic assessment.

Course include:

Electronic course manual

Pre- and post- course assessment

One-day workshop with lectures and small group practical skill stations
